Mix Masters

As discerning as Californians are about the food they eat, caring about what they drink shouldn't be such an afterthought," says Josh Harris, who co-founded The Bon Vivants with friend Scott Baird in an effort to help people live better through "cocktail quality control." The pair trains and consults for some of San Francisco's busiest bars (Romolo 15, Quince, Eve), mixing classic libations with strong culinary influences. This month, the pair opens Quince's new casual cafe, Cotogna, in Jackson Square with a (vodka-free) cocktail lineup that changes with the menu. They are also working on a retail line of bitters that will launch later in the year. bonvivants-sf.com.
